Chappy Chatter with Chappy Jason

Well how would you be, term 2 almost complete and half the year is nearly done! I was going to share a bit more of my story and connecting with young people, but I might hold that over till next term. Instead I would like to highlight an opportunity for you.....to connect with your young people over the school holidays. Think about what I have shared over the last couple of weeks, pick up on what stood out to you and try that with the young people around you? Find some commonality or connection point, it might mean being silly playing minecraft or having tea with the toys, but what is more important? For genuine, positive, healthy relationships we have to connect, we have to be willing to listen, be genuine and take the time. We can model by example how important people and relationships are if we use these skills. Aren't the young people in your family and around you worth that time and effort? You don't get many chances before they are gone, grown up and becoming adults that you will be proud of. Make each day count; they are too short as it is! I will be away on 'Teenstreet' Camp with 500 teenagers over the holidays working on these thoughts myself, what will you be doing?
